

Removing Your Graphic:

- 1) Using heat is the simplest and safest way to remove graphics from an automobile. If you have access to an industrial heat gun (a hair dryer does not get hot enough), work in small areas and heat the graphics to about 180°F (wear gloves to protect your hands from the heat), and simply pull them off at 180° angle. They will pull off very easily. If the graphic becomes hard to pull, simply add more heat.
- 2) If you do not have access to an industrial heat gun you will have to remove the graphic as is. This will be harder. Carefully pull a corner and slowly peel the graphic off the car at a 180° angle. It is critical you pull the graphic back upon itself at this angle. If you do not, you will risk pulling paint off the car, especially in areas where the car has been previously damaged and/or repainted.
- 3) Once all the graphics have been pulled off, check for any adhesive residue. While this product is designed to pull off cleanly, with heat, some slight residue may exist and must be clean off. Use a rag dampened with kerosene, mineral spirits, Naphtha or alcohol (Goo-Gone also works well) to remove the remaining adhesive residue. Follow this with a wash with detergent and water.
