Dipping into art

Andy Holzman/Staff Photographer
